A collection of fine wood.

Every wood species has attributes and characteristics that make it unique. The natural character in each species contributes to the personality and tone you desire for your home. Often the wood species is a key element to a style, such as quarter sawn oak in a Shaker-inspired design or ribbon mahogany to elicit the warmth and richness of custom-made furniture. Explore our collection and imagine the possibilities.

Family-owned and American made.

From the first cabinet built in a small Pennsylvania lumber mill in 1942 to custom kitchens completed in our state-of-the-art facility today, each and every Wood-Mode cabinet is proudly made in the USA.

Seventy-five years of growth have not changed our approach to building cabinetry. The skill and dedication of the individual woodworker is still at the heart of Wood-Mode quality. Our family of employees includes as many as three generations of highly skilled craftsmen working side by side. From the selection of the lumber to our celebrated finish, a majority of the cabinetry making process is still completed by hand.

While technology enables us to fulfill more dreams with consistently impeccable quality, even the automated portions of our construction process are overseen by experienced cabinetmakers. At each and every stage, from lumber selection and milling to finish and assembly, it is the knowledge of the American craftsman that makes Wood-Mode a leader in fine custom cabinetry.

A caring commitment to the environment.

Wood-Mode has been practicing environmental stewardship for more than 25 years—long before “being green” was popular. From a self-sustaining unit that eliminates 99.8% of all emissions to using sawdust and scrap to fuel and power much of the operation, we take pride in producing the industry’s highest quality cabinetry in a manner that demonstrates its genuine concern and care for the environment.
